End-of-the-Year Report Presented to Board

▶ The report recaps last academic year and features a ton of pictures and names.

At first glance one could easily confuse the End-of-the-Year Report with a yearbook. After all, the document features more than 100 photographs and graphics and the names of probably the same number of faculty, staff, administrators, students and alumni. The End-of-the-Year Report was presented by Dr. Lewis to the Board of Trustees on Tuesday night.

Included in the report are an introduction from Dr. Lewis, an executive summary, a section on student achievement, one on the accomplishments of the college’s employees, and a spread on the accomplishments of Public Information Office.

The California Department of Parks and Recreation is working with photography students of Cypress College on an exciting project documenting the unique character of the Crystal Cove State Park Historic District in Orange County, CA. In partnership with the park’s cooperating association, students will be assigned to the seaside colony to photograph the 1920’s era cottages, historic landscape and features, daily park scenes, and other interesting historical elements of the public park.

The goal of this project is to document the Historic District prior to, and during, the comprehensive restoration effort of the Preservation and Public Use Plan. Originally part of Mexico’s Rancho San Joaquin and later Irvine Ranch property, the Historic District was part of the 1979 purchase of Crystal Cove State Park. Used in the early 1900’s as a Hollywood silent movie set, the cottages were built between 1920 and 1940 and remain mostly unchanged; standing as the last in tact example of an early California beach colony. Each cottage holds unique architectural and design elements that remind visitors of simpler times.

This photography project will compliment state parks effort to create a comprehensive photographic inventory of these historical treasures. A final exhibition will display the photos and short historical information about early cottage life to give a more personal feel to the exhibition.

The photos will be exhibited during 2003/2004 at several park special events. In addition the photos will be displayed at Cypress College and some may be used in state park publications and educational materials.
